EMPLOYMENT Assistant Professor, Tenure Track (2011–present)
Linguistics & Languages, McMaster University

EDUCATION MIT (2002–2007)
Ph.D. program in linguistics (5-year program in Syntax)
PhD Thesis Title: The Syntax of Givenness
Thesis advisors: Danny Fox, Sabine Iatridou, Alec Marantz and David Pesetsky

Charles University, Prague (2000–2002)
Ph.D. program in computational linguistics
(completed two years, including qualifying exams)

Charles University, Prague (1994–2000) M.A. in Czech language and literature
M.A. Thesis Title: Subject-Predicate Agreement in Czech
Departmental nominee for Bolzano Award (Charles University) for best ungraduate thesis

RESEARCH INTERESTS Syntax-semantics interface:
presuppositions and their grammatical realization; information structure: givenness, focus, alternatives; left periphery (second position phenomena, freezing effects); structure of DP (split constructions, NP versus DP, quantification); agreement and its semantic effects; feature representations Syntax:
well-formedness conditions on syntactic structure; extension requirements of certain functional heads; null subjects, verbal morphology, head movement
Morphology:
inflectional versus derivational morphology; number, gender; aspect Computational linguistics:
statistical machine translation; parsing of free word order languages
Language families:
Slavic, Germanic, Romance, Semitic, Inuttitut
