Notes.

⁷ Tone IV is often transposed to the fourth above when endings iv, v, viii and ix are used. This transposition accomodates a major second above the finalis.

⁸ Tone V has no solemn form. The alternate form of ending i. appears only infrequently, and appears to be a later development. See for example I. Vespers, Trinity, 5. Ant. Ex quo omnia. G. H. Palmer (SP:xviii.) suggests that an additional weak syllable between the accents of endings i. and ii. should be C, not B.

⁹ In ST these forms are transposed to the fifth above. The transposition allows for a major second below the finalis in the antiphon. In ST:lxix-lxx, the variant mediations appear in proximity to one another. The former seems to be more common in Sarum use. In AS the penultimate neume frequently appears as a cephalicus (liquescent clivis), G-F.

¹⁰ Tone VII is sometimes transposed to the fourth above when endings i and ii are used.

¹¹ Tone VIII is occasionally found transposed down a fifth.

¹² According to SP:xxij, "The Irregular or Peregrine tone is probably of Byzantine origin, and was introduced into France in the ixth century. Even in the xth century it was styled tonus novissimus, and it was not until the beginning of the xjth century that it came into general use. Since that time it has been included in the various Tonalia under the head of Tone VIII. Owing to the complex nature of its ending (as given in English mss.) it requires to be noted throughout to any Psalm or Canticle with which it is used."

¹³ ST:lxiv. gives only the first two verses. In ST:lxiv. "Israel" is set AB♭ G G. In 1519-P:141v, at verse 20, "Israel" is set G G F; at verse 21 "Dominum" is set G G F; at verse 21 "super vos" is set G G F.

¹⁴ ST:lxiv. gives only the first three verses. 1519-P:24r gives only the first two verses. The remainder has been set by the editor. In 1519-P:24r, verses 1 and 2, "Domino" is set G G F.

¹⁵ ST:lxiv. gives only the first four verses. 1519-P:27v gives only the first two verses. The remainder has been set by the editor. In 1519-P:27v, verse 2, "in domo" is set AB♭ G G.

¹⁶ ST:lxiv gives only the first two verses. 1519-P:144r gives only the first verse. The remainder has been set by the editor. In ST:lxiv. "Magnificat : anima" is set AB♭ A A G G G.
